What is an IDS meeting like? IDS meetings follow a number of different formats, but they always include an educational activity about daffodils or gardening with daffodils. These activities may be a spoken presentation, a slide show, a hands-on workshop, a demonstration or a panel discussion. There is always an opportunity to ask questions, and since most IDS members grow a large variety of plants in their gardening activities, you can be sure to learn a lot about all kinds of gardening. Most meetings also feature a pot luck lunch or dinner, and if you think we grow beautiful daffodils, you should taste our homemade goodies!

The August and October meetings feature a Bulb and Plant Exchange. Not everybody has bulbs to share; it depends on if they dug this summer, or not, but there are always tons of bulbs in October. Some of our members do some propagation (rooting of cuttings, for example) to share, others might find a great deal on perennials at a local garden center and pick up a couple for the exchange. Still others might have a garden book or a pack of floral napkins....it is a mixed bag. For sure there is great food at every meeting - things that are healthy, and things that are not-so-healthy!

To learn more about developing a spring facelift for your garden, join the Indiana Daffodil Society, a group of enthusiastic daffodil growers which meets four times a year. You will be able to buy the best bulbs at member pre-sales, take advantage of our two plant and bulb exchanges, test your mettle in shows, and meet other local gardeners from around the state. You'll also receive our newsletter which includes updates on society events, planting tips, soil preparation, member spotlight, catalogs, websites of interest, as well as how-to articles on daffodil culture and effectively using daffodils in the landscape.
